Today is the Fifteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time and we hear first from the prophet Isaiah. The Bible views God's word as a force, an active agent that effects what it sets out to do. God's word never goes in one ear and out the other. Today's brief verse is taken from a longer passage in which God's voice summons all the thirsty, the poor and the hungry to "come to the water." Those who answer his call will not go away empty. This short, one sentence reading makes a single point: "my word" achieves "the end for which I sent it."

In our second reading from Paul's Letter to the Romans. For Paul, "the sufferings of the present time" were as nothing compared with the "glory" that would come his way because of Christ. Without being blind to the realities around him, Paul imagines the invisible realities God destines for us to share with Christ. A fascinating feature of Paul's teaching is that while creation endures the futility and corruption that are the wages of sin, creation will also enjoy the blessings and glorious freedom of the children of God. Paul concludes with the powerful image of a woman giving birth. "All creation is groaning" as if in labor. In all of life there a sense of more that waits fulfillment. That same awareness is in us, for though we have "the firstfruits of the Spirit" we await the liberation of our bodies from our old and sinful self. Though saved, we live in an in-between place in which the power of sin still calls us, and where we occasionally fail. But the love of God has claimed us and so ultimately we are his, though we must patiently await our full "adoption" and the "redemption of our bodies."

Among Jesus' parables, this one probably generates the most debate. The parable is simple enough, for it speaks of the miraculous power of God present in the ministry of Jesus. The astonishing success represented by seed that yields a hundredfold (an impossible amount) suggests that divine intervention will overcome opposition to the Gospel and ensure the dramatic growth of the kingdom. There are three distinct movements in this passage. First is the parable itself. Second is Jesus' response to the question of why he speaks in such a cryptic manner. Third is the allegorical interpretation, placed on the lips of Jesus. This gospel presents understanding as a special gift that God bestowed upon true

Disciples but withheld from the crowds. But individuals are held responsible for failing to understand because they "look but do not see and hear but do not listen." At the start of the parable the seed seems to represent God's word and the hearers are the soil into which it falls. But in Jesus' interpretation we realize that the seed represents believers and their various levels of appropriating the Word. We encounter those who embrace the Word, others who eagerly hear it but quickly lose it, and the waning interest of the one worn away by anxiety and seduced by the lure of riches.

We're continuing to work frantically on plans for the Irish Festival. We have done a proposed layout of the area and St. Patrick parishioner Paul Balczun is making a scale model of every booth so that we can make sure everything is going to fit, that there will be room for traffic to flow, etc. We have had additional electricity brought in to accommodate all of the cooking which will be done in an area behind the rectory. The food will be in that same area. The stage and dance floor as well as an area for people to sit and listen to the music will all be held in front of the church. We will erect 30 foot wide tents on East Fourth Street from the driveway just to the west of the rectory to the east side of the church. The street itself is 30 feet wide.

In case of bad weather, everything at the festival will be under tents and we can close the flaps if we need to; but I assure you we're going to have good weather!!!!

We will soon begin asking for volunteers and we are going to need a great deal of them this year, so I'm hoping that everyone will be willing to give some time. There is great excitement about bringing the festival back downtown. It is also going to give us a chance to showcase St. Patrick's Church because many people have not seen it since the restoration. We will need people to be inside the building on one or two hour shifts while the building is open.

We developed a very bad leak in the weekday chapel at St. Patrick's, and hopefully it is repaired. A section of the ceiling started to come down from all of the heavy rain that we had. There is a downspout just above the area and it seems that is the problem. It is never ending with these old buildings. We are also having a problem again with bats in St. Hedwig's Rectory. I had them all of the time I was living there. They somehow get in under the front porch roof, and we've tried everything to seal that area, but they are smarter than we are.

I hosted both bishops and about 25 priests for a retirement party for Monsignor Tom McSweeney at St. Patrick's recently. Seeing all of those priests in the house reminded me of the times when I was a young priest and Father Plunket would host Friday evening open house for all of the priests. There would be 50 to 75 of us in here. The area on the first floor of the rectory that we use as a copy room was a bar in the original house, and that was always well stocked. The dining room table was piled high with cold cuts, potato salad, etc. It made for great camaraderie among the priests and all of that is gone today. With so many of us having two and three parishes, there simply isn't time to get together with one another.

We welcome Ryan Palm as a new lector at St. Patrick's. Ryan is in Development at Mercyhurst University and he and his wife Sarah are the parents of two beautiful children. I'm always looking for more lectors.

Walking down the street in Dublin, Father Flaherty met a woman and said, "Top o' the mornin' to ye! Aren't you Mrs. Donovan and didn't I marry ye and your hoosband two years ago?" She replied, "Aye, that ye did, Father." Father then asked, "And be there any wee ones yet?" "No, not yet," she replied. "Well, then," said Father Flaherty, "I'm going to Rome next week and I'll light a fertility candle for ye and yer hoosband." "Oh, thank ye, Father," she replied and they parted ways. Some years later they met again and Father asked, "Well, now Mrs. Donovan, how are ye these days?" "Oh, very well," she replied. And then he asked, "And tell me, have ye any wee ones yet?" She replied, "Oh yes, Father, two sets of twins and six singles. Ten in all." Father replied, "That's wonderful, and how is your husband doing?" She replied, "E's gone to Rome to blow out your damn candle."

FESTIVAL NEWS

Please join us after the 10:30 Mass for a meeting in the Pascal Room. Plans to bring the Festival downtown to St. Patrick's property are moving right along! We need everyone to be well informed and we need YOU to make it a success!

We are in need of a chairperson for the festival tear down committee. We will have plenty of volunteers who will do the physical work of taking down chairs, tables, etc. We need someone to oversee the process. If you are willing to consider this please contact Angie Kontur at angie.k1@verizon.net or 434-9653.

IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN LADIES—to clean out and recycle your costume jewelry items for the Festival Jewelry Booth! We are beginning to organize the jewelry to be sold at the Festival (with all proceeds going to the parish). Donations can be dropped off at the Trinity Gift Shop or Rectory, or by calling Gail Smith at 833-9484.

A Moment of Reflection

Reading I: Isaiah 55:10-11

Gospel: Matthew 13:1-23

How differently each person responds to the gift of God's life. To become who God created us to become, we need to nourish our relationship with God through prayer and a community of believers. We are called to do this in different ways and by using different methods. And sometimes God calls us in spite of ourselves and our errant ways. How has God's Word takes root in you over the years?

FOUND: A charm to a Pandora bracelet has been found near St. Patrick's. Call the rectory to identify. 454-8085, ext.1.

PLEASE NOTE!! St. Patrick's Offices will be closed on Thursday, July 17th and Friday, July 18th to allow for workers to restore the hardwood floors in the lobby.
